

COS: A field is, as every farmer knows, a living system—just as the earth is a living organism. I grew up on a farm in northern Germany. One of the things my father, one of the pioneers of biodynamic farming in Germany, taught me, was that the living quality of the soil is the most important thing in agriculture. Each field, he explained to me, has two aspects: the visible, which is what we see above the surface; and the invisible, which is what we find below the surface. The quality of the yield—the visible result—is a function of the quality of the soil, of those elements that are invisible to the eye....
